WED IN CHURCH RITES

In a lovely setting of gladiolas, snapdragons and tapers at the Michelson Memorial Church, Miss Betty Jane Smith became the bride of Bennie C. Allen on Saturday morning, May 4, at eleven o'clock. Betty is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clair Smith of Lake Michigan. Rev. C. R. Puffer solemnized the single ring ceremony. Mrs. Stuart Jones of Muskegon, an aunt of the bride, played Lohengrin's Wedding March and Mrs. June Gross sang "I Love You Truly" before the ceremony.

Wearing a white net gown and fingertip veil, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her flowers were red roses and lily petals. Mrs. Carl Smith of the reception at the home of the bride, as matron of honor, was attired in pink net and her flowers were pink carnations. Robert Bigham of Frederic served as best man. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Smith chose a gold colored dress with brown accessories and wore a corsage of pink carnations, lily petals and sweet peas. Mrs. Allen wore grey with black and white accessories and her corsage was the same.

Forty guests were present at the reception at the home of the bride's parents, immediately following the ceremony. The traditional wedding cake centered the bridal table.

The newlyweds are both graduates of Grayling High School, class of '45. He received his discharge from the United States Navy on April 6, following a year and a half of service. The bride was a member of the queen's court of the 1946 winter carnival. Mr. Allen was an outstanding athlete while at Grayling High School.

For her honeymoon, Mrs. Allen chose a going away suit of light blue crepe and wore white accessories. The couple are spending the week in Canada.

SERVICES FOR PETER HANSON
Funeral services were held last Saturday at the Sorenson Funeral home for Peter Hanson, who passed away at Mercy Hospital Thursday, May 2, at the age of 78. Rev. Svend Holm officiated. Christ Johnson, Albert L. Roberts, Carl Larson, Roy McEvers, Paul Ziebell and Nels Nielsen, fellow members of the Odd Fellows order, were pall bearers. Interment was in Elmwood Cemetery.

The deceased was born in Malballe, Falster, Denmark, on June 21, 1868, and had been a resident of Grayling for many years, being employed for the most part by the Salling-Hanson Company. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johanne Rasmussen of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Campbell of Mt. Pleasant, were among those present at the services.

Medical Plan Gains Throughout Nation

Michigan's system of providing medical and surgical care for veterans and the civilian version of the same plan, are gaining nationwide popularity as "a compromise between free enterprise and state medicine." Bill Davidson, former Army sergeant, declares in a signed article in the current issue of Collier's.

Major General Paul R. Hawley, Acting Chief Medical Director of the Veterans Administration, Dr. Stanley Insley, president, Wayne County Medical Society, and Dr. R. L. Novy and Jay Chavira, president and vice president respectively, Michigan Medical Service, are given credit for inaugurating it.

Under the veterans plan, veterans eligible for medical or surgical care are treated by their own doctors and paid by the Veterans Administration. Davidson explains. Under the civilian plan, low-income individuals and families "can pay a small sum every month for hospital or surgical fees (or all three) in event of illness."

The Veterans Administration, which gave its blessing last fall to the plan, is now setting up the same system in four other states, Davidson reports; medical representatives of 10 other states have conferred with the Veterans Administration about it, and the Board of Trustees of the American Medical Association—the arch foe of socialized medicine—has given the civilian version its okay.

"At first, many of the doctors (of Michigan) considered this socialized medicine, too, with a sugar coating," Davidson declares. "Some of them still do. But gradually it dawned on more of them that it isn't they're asked to do that in civilian form the Michigan Plan can do all the things for the underprivileged that the President's socialized medicine promised to do, with the doctors themselves retaining control."

Robert Dodge Talks At School Assembly

R. O. Dodge, Supervisor of Region II Parks and Recreation Division, Michigan Department of Conservation, spoke to Grayling High students Tuesday morning, April 30. His topic was "Michigan State Parks."

In his talk Mr. Dodge gave an interesting account of the history of our state park system. He showed the value of a system of state parks to the tourist business. The speaker pointed out the responsibilities of the park administration to the public and the responsibility of citizens concerning the use and care of park facilities.

Mr. Dodge graduated from the Michigan State College, receiving his B.S. degree in Landscape Architecture. He worked with the CCC in park development for three years, serving in the Alpena, Petoskey and Gaylord areas. He served for three years as a Lieutenant in the Navy and a South Atlantic theater, where he served as Convoy and Routing officer, stationed in Brazil. His office at present is located in Roscommon.

The High School Girls Glee Club, under the direction of Mrs. Roy Milnes, began the program by singing two selections by Victor Herbert, "Moonbeams" and the "Italian Street Song."

Pvt. Burton S. Peterson has arrived at Fort Lawton, Washington.

YOUR CHILD'S PICTURE MAY BE PUBLISHED IN THIS PAPER FREE

Saturday, May 11, is the big day for the picture taking of your youngsters. The Crawford Avalanche is having pictures taken of all children who are brought by their parents or other guardian to the dining room of the Masonic Hall between 1:00 p. m. and 8:00 p. m., absolutely free of charge. The Woltz Studios of Des Moines, Iowa, nationally known children's photographers, will be in charge of the photography. The Avalanche wants a picture of your child to print in its forthcoming feature "Citizens of Tomorrow," a series of photographic studies of local children. The more we get the better the feature will be, so the co-operation of mothers and fathers is urged.

Now Is The Time
It often seems to parents that children are little ones, minutes and are grown up the next so fast does a child's growing stage pass. Here is a splendid opportunity to catch a likeness of your child or children at this present stage for the pleasure you will get out of it in future years and for the pleasure you will enjoy seeing it in print. You will want to clip it from this, your home town newspaper, and preserve it for the youngster when he or she grows up.

There is absolutely no charge or obligation for taking the pictures. Parents don't even have to be subscribers to the Avalanche, nor even readers. You do not have to purchase pictures either, though you may obtain a limited number of additional prints by arranging direct with the studio if you want them. That is entirely up to you! There is no age limit.

Children are looking forward to fun, since our previous announcement of this coming event, is shown in numerous instances. One child's mother was uncertain about the date and they had a slight discussion which ended with the child saying firmly, "Well, I'm going to the Avalanche and see about it!"

Conservation Notes
Careless fishermen caused 3 fires in the first 4 days of the trout season—with a loss of 28 acres of land burned over. Two of the fires were caused by cigarette butts thrown in grass along the stream; the other by an unquenchable bonfire left by a fisherman after cooking his lunch.
At this writing there have been 13 days without precipitation of any kind and the most hazardous fire conditions possible now exist throughout the county.
Co-operation in preventing and suppression of these fires is needed from all who use our forest lands to prevent great loss. Fire has destroyed thousands of acres in our neighboring counties.

The Beginning Of Civilization?

The State Department has drawn up an American proposal for international atomic control to be submitted to the United Nations, which is encouraging. The proposal is based upon a report written for the State Department by a committee of leading scientists and business men who literally worked night and day for two months as practical men trying to find a solution to a practical problem.

Life Magazine sums up their efforts in the following words: "Their answer... sensibly recognizes that not even the atom can frighten nations into mutual trust. So... the report would set up an Atomic Development Authority which would work toward full international control by stages, none of them irreversible. In effect the United States would share its atomic secrets with the ADA only as fast as Russia and other countries give ADA personnel the right to free entry and inspection of all atomic facilities. The ADA would gradually take title to all uranium deposits and processing plants and would also build them in other countries. But it would do this on such a schedule that at every step any nation such as the United States will still be in a relatively secure position, compared to any other nation."

"An important fact turned up by the committee is that fissionable material can be 'denatured' i.e., rendered useless for explosives while useful for peaceful applications. The ADA would distribute only denatured plutonium among member countries. To turn this into the dangerous variety can only be done by a difficult and hard-to-conceal process."

If mankind can adjust itself constructively to the atomic age it will for the first time be justified in applying the term 'civilization' to its collective endeavors.

HEALTH

Heart Care

The very thought of heart disease strikes fear in most people. They think of heart disease as attacking suddenly, with great pain and as bringing immediate death. This may be true in middle life and old age. However, there are various kinds of heart disease. All of them do not develop suddenly, nor are they necessarily fatal.

Nevertheless, heart disease is one of the most serious health problems in this country. In fact, it is the leading cause of death. In 1943, the last year for which complete statistics are available, it was responsible for 428,391 deaths, or 318.3 per 100,000 population.

Unfortunately, the fear of heart disease is at the root of many deaths from it. Because of fear, people ignore warnings. They do something is amiss. When they finally do muster the courage to see a doctor, often it is too late.

The body gives various warnings that the heart is overburdened or diseased. Some of these signals are breathlessness after exertion, dizziness, fatigue, vague digestive disturbances, swelling of the feet and ankles and pains in the chest.

Such pains are not always due to heart disease, and of course digestive disturbances may be traceable to any one of a number of causes. But there is no point in ignoring any of these warnings. They may indicate heart trouble. The safe policy is to heed the signals and see a doctor.

Certain illnesses often weaken the heart, and too great exertion after a severe sickness may have an adverse effect on the heart. Caution should be observed occasionally after an illness due to any of the infectious diseases of childhood.

Periodic physical examinations are the best insurance against developing serious heart trouble. The individual who goes to the doctor regularly for a check up, without waiting to be stricken by illness, may learn of a heart disorder before it reaches serious proportions.

Many types of heart trouble can be treated effectively if discovered in time. People who have, or have had, heart trouble do not necessarily have to lead lives of invalidism. Certain strenuous occupations may be denied them, but they can still lead normal lives if they follow rules of moderation.

The treatment for tuberculosis will be discussed in the next article.

State OVA Increases Job-
Training Expediter Staff

An increase in the Special Projects staff by the addition of four more veterans' training co-ordinators was announced early this week by the State Office of Veterans' Affairs. With this addition nine co-ordinators familiarly known as job-training-expeditors are available to plan with employers and assist in the writing of training plans for veterans in the on-the-job phase of the G. I. Bill of Rights. At least one co-ordinator is to be assigned full-time to the Upper Peninsula.

During the past week and all next week the new co-ordinators are undergoing an intensive training course. This is to provide them with knowledge of correct procedures and future development. In addition it will give them necessary "know-how" to make a training plan which will insure that approved veter-

Employers interested in securing the services of a co-ordinator are advised to see the local veterans' counselor and ask that the counselor make the necessary arrangements.

Good Trees
and Good Taverns

'About the finest stand of timber in our county is on Asa Fullmore's farm. Asa says it's due to "regulation"—checking on trees that don't come up to standard, and trimming them off to give the other trees a chance for healthy livelihood.

He was explaining it to us in Andy Botkin's Garden Tavern, and Andy nodded approvingly.

"The same goes for any industry," says Andy. "Like the brewers who give us tavern keepers beer to sell. If they find the place isn't up to standard—clean and courteous and wholesome—they start giving warning. Then, if the warning isn't heeded, they start trimming!"

From where I sit, self-regulation within the brewing industry has done as much to give us pleasant, wholesome places to enjoy a moderate glass of beer, as Asa Fullmore's forestry has done to keep his white pines tall and healthy. It's nature's own protection—and the best there is!

Ann Arbor—How Fort Detroit was warned of Pontiac's conspiracy has become one of the many myths which distort Michigan history, according to F. Clever Bald, was historian at the University of Michigan.

The story involves an Indian woman who is reputed to have warned Major Gladwin, commander of Fort Detroit, that the Indian chieftain was planning to seize the fort. First accounts of the incident, Bald relates, said an old squaw named Catherine alerted the major to expect Indian treachery.

She is reported to have delivered a pair of moccasins to the major, who was so pleased with her handiwork that he ordered another pair, only to be told she could not make them. Asked her reason for refusing, Catherine supposedly revealed Pontiac's plot.

Bald declares a study made by Helen F. Humphrey, former curator of maps at the University of Michigan's Clement Library, showed this account was used by five writers from 1766 to 1839. Then Miss Humphrey found that Francis Parkman in the first ed-

CHAPTER XXII

"Holy smoke!" he exclaimed. Thunderhead and the mares disappeared in the twinkling of the passage. Ken began to trot after them and Howard followed. Ken was still calling desperately, "Come, boy! Get your oats! Here Thunderhead! Oats!"

The passage narrowed. They were going through the keyhole, passing directly underneath the great boulder which hung over it, and the next moment there was the wide spread of the valley before them, ghostly with a faint luminescence through which the dark forms of the horses moved like shadows.

Then light flooded the heavens and the shafts of rosy gold poured down from the rising sun to bathe the snow covered peaks of the Never-Summer Range.

Not even the disaster of Thunderhead's rebellion could lessen the impact of this sight upon Howard.

"Holy smoke!" he exclaimed again and stood motionless. But Ken's agonized eyes found what they were looking for. The Albino, and his instant alert as Thunderhead entered the valley! The two stallions saw each other at the same moment. The Albino rushed forward as if for immediate attack, then turned and began to round up the far flung band of mares and colts behind him. At a swift twisting gallop he circled them, gathered them all in and bunched them in an invisible corral. All his actions were strained and nervous.

But Thunderhead moved with exuberance and calm. His muscles flowed smoothly under his satin coat as he leisurely circled his little band of stolen mares, bunched and froze them, then trotted out in front.

The two stallions faced each other about a hundred yards apart, motionless as statues. The Albino moved forward a little, then stopped. He did this again. Thunderhead stood without a quiver, his head high, his weight forward, his hind legs stretched back.

Ken suddenly thrust the nose-bag into Howard's hands. "Hold that! They're gonna fight! I've got to get him!"

He ran to Thunderhead, calling his name. Thunderhead did not even twitch an ear in his direction. He was watching the Albino with a minute, comprehensive stare that penetrated the body and timed the nerve fuses.

Ken seized the dangling halter rope and flung his weight on it. "Come away! Come away, Thunderhead!"

He hauled with all his power, trying to break the stallion's fixation, but he might as well have tried to move a rock. The stallion stared over him, immobile.

The boy burst out crying and struck at the stallion's head, jerking to and fro with all his weight. "Oh, stop it, Thunderhead! Please, Thunderhead! Come away!"

Howard dropped the nose-bag, rushed to his brother's side and seized the halter.

Ken's voice reached Thunderhead directly but he made no response. This was his world, his inheritance. Ken had no part in it. But how to become master of it? Only by the destruction of that which barred his way.

Rearing backward, he shook loose, knocking Howard down and snapping Ken aside with a whip-lash of his head. Then, screaming his challenge, he hurtled forward as from a spring-board.

In subsequent editions of his book, Parkman added footnotes giving other versions of the story, but still clung to the heart interest theme. Of the story, Parkman wrote, "those may believe it who will."

Another romantic aspect of the myth, which according to Miss Humphrey has as little basis in fact, was that Major Gladwin was tipped off by the French fiancée of a British merchant at Detroit. The French maiden, who later married the merchant, would have had every reason to warn the commander in order to prevent her lover from being scalped.

ters, Thunderhead forcing the Albino backwards. Then he loosed the grip of his forelegs and began to use them for attack, flailing with his hoofs on the back of the Albino, raking the flesh from the bones and striving to land a crippling blow on the kidneys.

For an instant the massive jaws crunching down on Thunderhead's jugular vein relaxed, he tore loose, both horses wheeled, plunged away, then whirled to eye each other again and to get their wind and their balance for the next charge.

There was a jagged bleeding gash in Thunderhead's throat. The Albino was laced with pulsing crimson streams. The unnatural expansion of his nostrils showed the beginning of exhaustion.

Again, as if animated by a single will, the stallions charged each other with heads high and stiff, lifted tails. Meeting, rising, averting, sinking with indescribable coiling grace—not one motion lost—they turned their heads sideways with bared reaching teeth and thrust them forward and under to seize the foreleg.

Each blocked this maneuver cleverly; they braced themselves against each other with locked, straining necks, and swung back first one and then the other foreleg out of reach of the darting, snake-like heads. But Thunderhead was as quick as a rattler. His muzzle thrust in and caught

The Albino drew first blood, the lower leg of the Albino before he could withdraw it and fractured the bone with a single twisting crunch of the jaws.

The Albino gave no sign. The moment Thunderhead loosed his hold, the older horse rose to his full height. One foreleg dangled useless, but he still had that mighty right hoof with which he had nearly killed the colt two years ago. The same blow would do it now.

Thunderhead top was on his hind legs, flailing as if to strike. But he saw the blow coming. In mid-air he whirled, dropped his head and lashed out with his heels.

As the Albino came down with his killing stroke, his face received the full impact of those terrible hoofs, and both cheeks were ripped up so that the skeleton of his head was bared.

The Albino's one good foreleg hit the earth with a crashing jar. Thrown off balance by failure to land his blow, and the murderous kick, he sank to his knees. Before he could recover Thunderhead had spun around. His right hoof shot out in one paving stroke which crushed the bony structure of the old stallion's head and sliced off the lower part of his face.

Blood spouted from the fatal wound, mingled with the choking and bubbling breath. The Albino's eyes closed and his body sank into the earth, his head moving slowly from side to side in agony.

Thunderhead stood over him. The Albino's eyes opened once and looked up at Thunderhead. There was the vision. The shining phantom horse—oversoul of the line! To this prince of the royal blood he now bequeathed all his wisdom. He gave him knowledge of the voices of the trees and waters and the great snows and winds, so that nothing in the valley would be strange to him, no, not a single mare, nor the smallest colt nor a humming-bird nor eagle nor a blade of grass.

Thunderhead's right hoof rose and fell with lightning speed, cleaving the skull.

The Albino quivered and was still. Then one deep sigh came from him, and on it there ebbed away his life, while his blood and brains pumped slowly out to mingle with the earth of his beloved valley.

Thunderhead lifted his mighty crest and made the mountains ring with his unearthly screech of triumph.

"Stand, Thunderhead!"

Hardly had the echoes of Thunderhead's cry of victory ceased than a small, familiar figure was beside him, commanding him.

Obediently Thunderhead stood while two hands seized the halter rope and gripped his mane. Ken vaulted onto his back.

The stallion's eyes were on the mares. All through the fight they had stood in two close bunches, watching fascinated. Now that it was ended they began to disperse. They were confused and nervous.

Howard picked up the nose-bag and started toward Thunderhead. But the stallion suddenly plunged toward the mares. Ken flung his weight back, hauling on the rope, but it was whipped out of his hand as the great white head jerked impatiently, then dropped, snaking along the ground. The stallion was not only beginning the roundup of the mares, he was taking command and making himself known to them as their new master. Ken seized handfuls of the thick, wild mane.

Thunderhead galloped faster. He swept in a huge circle, whipping the two groups of mares into one. Then, as if merely to discipline them, he bored through them, scattering them again. They dispersed over half a mile. And now he began to herd them at full gallop. Not for a moment was he straight between Ken's knees. His body was in continual undulation. Ken was riding the end of a whip-lash, twisted mercilessly. Occasional cries of pain and helplessness burst from him. The stallion was driving the mares and colts further up the valley and they were all running now, increasing speed at the furious coercion of their new master.

A black runaway mare with a little white colt at her side streaked out at an angle from the band of mares, bent on escape. Thunderhead altered his direction and took after her. Ken felt the great body underneath him knotted and gathered for a sudden turn or stop—for any one of half a dozen maneuvers; and, unable to ride with his usual free, balanced seat, clung like a monkey.

The stallion came abreast of the mare and closed in. She did not surrender.

Ken knew what was coming and flung himself back, braced for the shock. The stallion reached over the mare and seized her neck in his powerful jaws, jerking it toward him, and at the same time threw himself back on his haunches.

Ken was flung sprawling on the horse's neck.

The mare's body went over in a complete somersault and she crashed to the earth, rolling over and over.

Ken, clinging to Thunderhead's neck, was, by a miracle, still on. The mare got shakily to her feet. Thunderhead galloped after the herd and she followed him obediently.

He reached and passed the mares, and took the lead. The black mare forged to the front of the band and the little white colt galloped mightily as if trying to reach the side of the stallion.

Wave after wave of nausea went over Ken. His face was deathly white. His body ached as if it had been beaten. His fingers in Thunderhead's mane clung merely because they were stiffly locked. He had lost all hope of ever getting control of his horse—the hills were sweeping past—he could not stick on any longer—the herd was thundering behind him. Where was Howard? Where was the keyhole, and safety, and Flicka? At this pace, he was leaving them far behind.

There came at last a moment of anguished exhaustion when he cared about nothing—only to be off.

He loosed his grip, flung himself flat back on Thunderhead's broad rump, at the same time swinging one leg over his withers and in this side-saddle position he slid to earth. His feet touched for a second, then he was hurled on his face.

He felt the jarring thud of the ground and lay there. The thunder of the herd roared up and over him. The ground shook. Clods of dirt and stinging gravel pelted him and abrupt blocks of light and darkness alternated over him as the big bodies of the mares lifted the air to clear him—one after the other.

It receded into the distance—that thunder of hoofs—until at last it was not even so loud as the sound of the wind in the pines, and his own heart-broken sobbing, and the harsh far-away cry of eagles who dropped from the clouds to feast upon royal carrion.

The command not to cause Nell any anxiety had been disobeyed. For the boys, sliding double on Flicka, hardly got home in time to hurry Howard into his clothes and pack his suitcases.

After he had gone, Ken sat down by his father's desk in the study and told the details of all that had happened.

Rob was in a very quiet mood. He sat in his square wooden chair, turned slightly toward Ken and puffed at his pipe.

"Why," said he at last, "did you take Thunderhead to a place where there were mares and another stallion?"

"But dad!" exclaimed Ken wearily, "he'd been there often before! And he had his own regular place to watch them from—perfectly safe up there on top of that rampart! He never went into the valley, not since that first time when he got the awful swat when he was a baby!"

"And so you figured he'd continue to do as he always had done. And that's where you made your mistake. After all, Thunderhead's three years old now, and in some ways, for a horse, that's grown up."

Ken's tired and dirty face turned away from his father, then came back to his father. "But he's never done any bull-raising. And he's been trained for running and racing. You said yourself a horse will develop the way he's trained."

A Tribute to Our Children

TO PUBLISH PICTURES OF LOCAL CHILDREN

Pictures of the children of this city and surrounding community are to be printed in this paper as a special tribute to our young citizens. Tomorrow the responsibility of guiding the destinies of the world will be placed upon their shoulders. All are invited and urged to participate in this featured event. Among our children are those destined to fame and fortune, so let's not omit any of them!

Every parent should cooperate to make this a colorful and inspiring exhibit. You can cut out and keep these pictures of every youngster in the community. They will always be treasured keepsakes and cherished memory records that could not be acquired in any other way.

You are all guests of ours, and all photographs will be taken free of charge.

We have made arrangements with the Wolts Studios, nationally known portrait photographers, to come and take the pictures right here in town. You do not have to order photographs, subscribe to, or be a subscriber to this newspaper, to have your pictures taken and run in this featured event. All that is necessary is that the children be brought by their parents to the photographer on the date and at the location mentioned below. Proofs of all poses will be submitted to the parents, and sets of approved poses will be prepared, identified, written up, and printed in this paper.

If photographs are wanted for yourself it will be necessary to arrange for them direct with the Studio when proofs are submitted for examination because they cannot be obtained through this paper.

Remember, all children must be accompanied by parents or guardians.

Mr and Mrs Charles Owen and sons, Dick and David, were in Traverse City, Saturday.

HONORED WITH SHOWER
Around twenty-five ladies were present at a bridal shower given last Thursday evening by the Misses Lois Berry and Vivian LaMotte at the LaMotte home. Miss Mary Howe, who was the honored guest, is to become the bride of Robert Ferguson on Sunday, May 12.

The prizes for the games played were won by Mrs Budd Sorenson, Mrs Lloyd Berry and Mrs June Cady, and were presented to the bride-to-be. A lunch was served to round out a very enjoyable evening.
